Subject: Wall Leak

I have a call in to Amy to see if she can give me more information about the location of the leak. She's not in this week. CRA went to the site and based on the little bit a vegetation visible in the picture they think the leak is not in the Halowax containment wall, but is actually in a nearly identical looking wall located south of the Halowax wall near the pump station. From the water this wall would look like it is part of the Halowax wall. This wall is not a groundwater containment wall or in any way associated with remediation. It's just a retaining wall. I'll talk to Amy on Monday and see what I can find out about the location. If we can't verify that it's not the Halowax wall that's leaking then I will likely arrange for an inspection by boat.

Also, please ignore anything I told you about the chain of ownership or the relationship of LSS to Arkema. Arkema Inc. is an American company headquartered in King Of Prussia, PA and LSS is Arkema's agent, LSS is also an American company and for purposes of the Statement of Basis can be treated as if we are a consultant, meaning LSS shouldn't be mentioned. Arkema is the responsible party. We manage the site on behalf of Arkema and are their exclusive authorized agent. Our attorney, Karen Davis is preparing a better explanation of all of this. I will send it to you on Monday.
